INTRO

(GODRIC, ROWENA, HELGA, and SALAZAR enter)

GODRIC: It's been awhile since we saw you.

HELGA: So let's catch you all up a bit on the recent events in the Wizarding World!

SALAZAR: Don't touch me.

ROWENA: It's 1971 here at Hogwarts. The whole world is in the thick of the "discos".

HELGA: We've just planted the Whomping Willow tree on the school grounds, SURE to keep dementors and demons away.

ROWENA: There are no dementors anywhere near the grounds, Helga.

GODRIC: The latest Quidditch World Cup was in 1966. It was the 415th tournament and it took place in Britain! The winners were the Australian National Quidditch Team by a long shot.

SALAZAR: Between you and me, the rise of Lord Voldemort has just begun, he is collecting his death eaters as we speak, throwing the whole Wizarding World for a loop with his use of the imperius curse. No one knows who's on his side by choice or by the curse.

ROWENA: Stop that, Salazar. It's terrible. The Ministry of Magic is putting innocent people in Azkaban without a trial.

SALAZAR: The first Wizarding War is about to begin…

HELGA: Wait, how does he know it's the first?

SALAZAR: Just wait-

GODRIC: Stop! We just need to give them the information they need for our show today.

HELGA: Okay! Rapid Fire! Dumbledore is still headmaster and has been for the last 20 years after being promoted from the Transfiguration teacher. Now, Professor McGonagall has that title. Hagrid is the groundskeeper, Professor Slughorn teaches potions and holds pride in his Slug Club, and Filch is…around…

ROWENA: Great. They're all caught up.

(They all prepare to leave.)

GODRIC: Oh! And remember the famous stories of Harry Potter, the Boy Who Lives? He's got parents and teachers who must have learned it all somewhere. So, he might not be born for another decade BUT a certain potions teacher and black dog animagus along with the young Lily and James Potter might just be on their way to school now…

HELGA: (popping her head onstage) C'mon, Godric! We need to get a good seat at King's Cross! The kids are arriving!

(He leaves.)
